CELCOMDIGI

Talking about data privacy

Published: May 20, 2025 2:19 PM • Updated: 2:19 PM

In today's fast-paced digital world, trust can feel like a rare commodity. Consumers are more aware than ever of how their data is being used, and businesses are navigating an increasingly complex landscape, with new regulations and emerging AI technologies making it harder to keep up.

A discussion must be had about tackling one of the biggest challenges of our time: how do we build trust in an era where AI and data are reshaping everything?

In Malaysia, CelcomDigi Berhad (CelcomDigi) is leading in creating a future where trust and technology go hand-in-hand, and their annual Trust Circle forum is the perfect example of this commitment.

The third edition of the Trust Circle forum, held recently, brought together over 50 companies and

IBM Tech Innovation Summit 2025: Catalysing Malaysia's AI-powered future

Published: May 6, 2025 4:02 PM • Updated: May 7, 2025 5:28 PM

As artificial intelligence reshapes industries worldwide, Malaysia is poised to seize new opportunities. On May 22, the IBM Tech Innovation Summit 2025 at Le Meridien Kuala Lumpur will spotlight the nation's digital momentum - bridging cutting-edge AI innovation with Malaysia's bold economic vision.

AI at a turning point

AI is no longer just a buzzword - it's a business imperative. An IBM study reveals that 89 percent of organisations plan to sustain or grow their AI investments in 2025, with nearly 40 percent ramping up spending by as much as half. The focus is shifting from experimentation to impact: corporations are using AI to modernise IT operations, enhance data quality, and drive smarter, faster decision-making.

Still, challenges persist. Malaysian businesses must overcome issues like siloed data, talent shortages and the cost of adoption. But those who take the lead will be positioned to unlock powerful advantages - from automation and predictive insights to hyper-personalised customer experiences and more robust risk management.
